

GAS IN WELL CAUSE OF 2 DEATHS

Black Damp Kills Two Men In Well Near Frankfort; Neighbor Dies Trying To Save Friend

Charles Johnson, aged 38 and W. W. Martin, 46 years, residents in the subdivision located two and half miles east of Frankfort at 78th av., and the Lincoln Highway, were victims of black damp gas while engaged in digging a well on the former's place Monday.

Johnson was delighted when he saw water flowing into his newly dug well which was 23 feet deep. He called his neighbor, Mr. Martin over to tell him about his success.

Pete Peterson and W. W. Martin who have been working on the Dr. Davis place came to see the well, also Chas. Moden. The Petersons and Martins returned to their work, a few minutes later Johnson went down into the well to clean up and found what he thought was a chamber which caused the water to bubble up only to find gas was coming out of the water instead of air.

He called to Moden who was helping him, to hurry and pull him up and while he was being drawn up with the bucket, he keeled over and fell back into the well. Moden called to Martin and Peterson for help. Martin insisted he be lowered to assist Johnson and was lowered only a few feet when he also cried out, "Get me up quick" which was done at once, but before he could be reached by those at the top of the well he yelled, "Gas, Gas" and lost his balance and fell to the bottom of the well.

The neighbors were quickly summoned, also John Collins, an ex-service man who has an army gas mask. He put on this mask and was lowered into the well only to find the valves of the mask out of order and he was compelled to give up his rescue attempt. The Chicago Heights Fire Department was then called and they rushed their pump to the well, but were unsuccessful in their attempts to get the two men out of the well.

A hurried trip had to be made back to the Heights to get an ammonia mask. Then the heroic work of Pete Peterson began. The mask was adjusted by the firemen and Peterson was lowered into the well. Just prior to this an attempt was made to raise the bodies with a hook on the end of a rope, but the rope broke when Martin's body was almost within reach of the rescuers. When Mr. Peterson descended into the well he made a rope fast to the body of Martin and he was raised to the surface. Then another trip was necessary to attach the ropes to the body of Johnson and he was brought to the surface. Mr. Peterson felt pretty groggy from the gas even though he wore the ammonia mask, but after he was given a dose of pure oxygen from the tanks he felt better.

Both men were pronounced dead when their bodies were brought to the surface. The fatal trip into the well was made at four o'clock in the afternoon and the bodies were not recovered until six o'clock.

The bodies were taken to the undertaking rooms of B. Zechlin in Frankfort where the inquest was held Tuesday noon by Deputy Coroner Blood of Will County. The coroner's jury found that both Johnson and Martin came to their deaths by accidental asphyxiation caused by breathing the gas known as black damp with an added comment in the Martin verdict, that he gave up his life trying to save Johnson.

Johnson is survived by his widow and three children. He was known in Frankfort as "C. W. Evans" and the mailbox at his home bore that name. His wife explained that his mother had been married twice and that while his right name was Johnson, her husband also used the name of his stepfather.

Mr. Martin was buried in the St. Mary Catholic cemetery in Mokena Wednesday afternoon.

Frankfort township had a similar case many years ago when two men died from black damp gas while cleaning out a dug well on the Brummond farm west of Mokena, now known as the Cappel farm. The gas is colorless and odorless and snuffs life by depriving its victims of oxygen.

Nothing will help instill thrift into your youngsters more than to start them out with bank accounts of their own.

You will have to make the deposits, at first—but get them interested!

Then as soon as they are old enough to earn a little money of their own, encourage them to put a part of it in their savings accounts.

When they grow up they will appreciate the value of money and realize the helpful influence of a bank book.

SWAP HUSBANDS AND WIVES; PROVES O. K.

Minot, N. D.—An unusual experiment in eugenics in which two neighboring families in this county swapped wives, husbands, children and homes three years ago has proved so successful in the three-year "try-out" that both women and their husbands are more than pleased and satisfied with the result, while neighbors who prophesied failure for the experiment have agreed they were mistaken. Welfare workers say it is the most unusual case in their experience, being absolutely unique.

The Knights and the Rikensruds are the families involved. Two husbands, two wives, and seven children were included in the mixup and the realignment which followed.

While the Knights had five children before the realignment, and the Rikensruds but two, under the new arrangements the Knights found themselves with but four children, while the Rikensruds had their family increased from two children to three. The two families were great friends before the experiment was tried and they remain just as good friends today. The children attended the same school, the parents went to the same church, and often the four parents would pile into the same automobile and go to the same "movie" show. They secured their divorces together and had a double marriage the next day. Then they all came back to their new homes.

Neither the Knights nor the Rikensruds were among the "newly weds" when they decided to exchange families. There was no "sudden impulse." The Knights had been married 17 years and the Rikensruds for 11 years when the readjustment was undertaken.

The head of one family is William Knight. Lawrence Rikensrud heads the other. The Knights were from Minnesota, Minn., originally, while the Rikensruds were married at Bottineau, N. D.

In time, the two families found themselves living on adjacent farms near Minot. Here they were close friends for several years, the children growing up together and the parents being about as intimate as the usual farm families.

Four or five years ago a change was gradually coming over the two families. Instead of husbands and wives pairing off together when the two families came to Minot on a double shopping expedition, or to attend a picture show, Knight and Mrs. Rikensrud often sat together, while Rikensrud and Mrs. Knight coupled seats alongside the other couple. Their friends got to teasing all four. It seemed a good joke.

But there was more to the affair than just a joke. One day in March, 1929, both women filed suits for divorce, alleging cruelty. The same lawyer acted for both. The two husbands were in the courtroom when the decrees were handed down by the judge.

The following morning Rikensrud married Mrs. Knight and Knight married Mrs. Rikensrud, with a double ceremony.

The honeymoons were spent together.

SAFEST OF VAULTS BEING CONSTRUCTED

London.—"I want the new Bank of England made so impregnable that no one could even steal so much as half a sovereign from its vaults. Even the theft of that small sum would ruin our prestige."

That statement, made by Mantagu Norman, governor of the Bank of England, is responsible for the mighty barricade of steel and cement being built 60 feet below the streets of London.

Norman's instructions are being carried out to the letter and the new vaults will withstand assault, fire, bombardment, dynamite and flood for the next 500 years. If any intruder even gets inside, he must face the danger of being drowned, shot or captured.

The new safes are costing £500,000 and will be the main feature of the new Bank of England building, now half finished. All work has been carried out behind high barricades.

The outer doors of the safes are described as artillery proof. The outer shells are bronze while the cores are solid blocks of 3-inch steel.

All the "strong room" system rests on a three-foot bed of concrete reinforced with hardened steel rods, and covered with a layer of steel. The sides of the vaults and safes are protected in the same way. Architects are certain that no amount of tunneling would ever permit access from below or from the sides.

The only feasible access to the safes and vaults will be from above, through massive grille gates and steel doors, guarded, if necessary, by machine gunners. Inside these gates and doors is a deep shaft, with elevators, leading down to the level of the vaults.

In emergencies this shaft can be flooded, drowning intruders, with no danger of the water penetrating the strong rooms.

There are more strong grills at the bottom of the shaft and the huge safe door weighs 25 tons. Not even the governor of the bank can open the safe door. The combination code of the lock is divided up, no one person knowing all of it.

Even inside the safe door there are innumerable steel doors to be opened before a single bar of gold could be removed from the rack on which it lies.

Modern Contract Bridge

Distributional Values

WHEN your hand indicates that a suit take-out is the best policy, but the sum of your honor-tricks is below the yardstick measurement for game, you should declare only a sufficient number of tricks to cover your partner's bid. In taking out with a no trump, use the yardstick measurement, bidding one or two no trumps according to the indications of your partnership holding in honor-tricks. In short, whenever you are taking out and it is still uncertain whether your partnership hands will prove congenial at your new bid, you must tread gingerly unless the sum of your honor-tricks spells "GAME."

Often however, when your partner has made an original suit bid of one, there may enter into your response a factor which justifies you in totally disregarding the yardstick measurement of honor-tricks, so important in most responses. This factor is the distribution of your hand. If your hand is so favorably distributed as to show great length in your partner's suit, length in a second suit and complete absence of a third, as for example: S-Q 10 9 8 7 6, H-5, D-none, C-10 9 8 6 5 3, when your partner has bid a spade, you could ignore your lack of honor-tricks and jump immediately into a game bid. Such a proceeding would be justified by the fact that your spade strength would so solidify your partner's trump holding as to promise no losers in that suit; your length in clubs offers the probability of setting up some end cards or giving your partner repeated ruffing opportunities, and most important of all in compensating for your deficit of honor-tricks, your short and missing suits would enable you to trump off your opponent's defensive strength in honor-tricks. It is certain that no more than one honor-trick in hearts could be cashed against you, and none at all in diamonds. So that even though your partnership total of honor-tricks sums up only to the 2½ which your partner's original bid guaranteed, your practical certainty of breaking down the opponent's defense is equivalent to a strong honor-trick holding when reckoned for its assisting value to your partner.

Playing Tricks

As a rule the last thing that a contract player learns is the most important thing he should know. That is, how to count the playing tricks in his hand.

Playing tricks are the general tricks your own hand may be expected to take if your declaration or your partner's declaration becomes final. When making an opening bid at no trumps, it is rarely possible to locate playing tricks, other than honor-tricks, because you have no definite long strong suit to establish. (With a biddable suit, you would not declare no trump.) But the count of honor-tricks in the hand will automatically include a proportionate amount of low card tricks.

When shifting into a no trump, or entering a later stage of the bidding with a no trump declaration, it is often possible to count definite playing tricks according to the location of strength shown by others bids or by the fact of a strong minor suit in your own or your partner's hand which can be set up. But for opening no trump bids and no trump raises and rebids, there is no better guide than the wardstick count of honor-tricks.

The direct and simple method of counting honor-tricks, so helpful in valuing no trumps, will not answer for raises and rebids at declared trumps, which must be played under totally different conditions. As a matter of fact, the difference in play of no trump and suit hands creates two almost totally different games; so that a separate system of valuation must necessarily be used for each.

The count of playing tricks at a suit bid is an easy matter for a player of long experience and judgment. Fortunately for the average player, in the approach-forcing system what is an unconscious mental process with the expert has been translated into a concrete form known as the distributional count. The distributional count may be mastered in half an hour's study, and once clearly comprehended, enables any team of players to value their hands at suit bids with the precision of experts.

Angling Pro and Con

Izaak Walton said: "We may say of angling as Doctor Boteler said of strawberries: 'Doubtless God could have made a better berry, but doubtless God never did'; and so, (if I might be judge) God never did make a more calm, quiet, innocent recreation than angling. But Doctor Johnson, a much more erudite man, defined a fishing rod as "a stick with a hook at one end and a fool at the other."

Civilization Built on Coal

Today's civilization requires more work than human labor can perform. The dominant source of brain replacing energy is coal. We are today using 20 times as much coal per capita as we did in 1850. Coal is the most important source of energy in our modern industrial civilization and has made our national life into a complicated network of interdependent groups with duties to each other.

THE ROMANCE of YOUTH

By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK, Emeritus Dean of Men,
University of Illinois.

I was thirteen when the narrow-gauge railroad between West Lebanon, Ind., and Havana, Ill., was built. I say Havana, Ill., though the construction was never completed farther than Leroy, I believe. It was a project which was to revolutionize agriculture in that part of the state in which I lived, and it gave all us children a thrill.

We traveled very little in those days. When we did go it was afoot or horseback, or in a farm wagon. I had never seen inside a railway coach when I was thirteen, but I had ambitions to do so. Ed Bailey and Taylor Curtis and I used to climb to the roof of the barn and watch the train, a little more than a mile away, creeping along the narrow track, or puffing up the grade which took it over the glacial morain toward the East and out of sight. That train spelled romance to us! We were not going to be farmers dragging our feet behind a plow or a harrow, not we! We were going to be engineers racing our trains along at 15 or 20 miles an hour.

I ran onto Billy a few days ago as I was coming home at noontime. Billy had been our neighbor a few years before and then had passed out of our domestic life for a time. Now here he was again, healthy and rosy and thirteen.

"Where do you live now?" I asked, and he told me.

"Are you going to school?" He was in the seventh grade, as a normal boy of his age should have been, and his chances of flunking or passing his examinations for promotion were about fifty-fifty.

"But I'm not going to college," he confided to me.

"No?" I said in an interrogatory tone of voice.

"I'm going to an aviation school. It isn't any more dangerous flying now than it is running an automobile.

"It's awful good pay, too!" I remembered that an engineer got one hundred dollars a month when I contemplated taking up that profession. It seemed a lot of money.

I didn't try to dissuade Billy. What is education as compared with the romance and the thrill of sailing through the air at a hundred miles an hour or more? The romance of youth!

A pinch of salt added to fruit sherbet will improve the flavor.

Clean discolored knife handles with a slice of cut lemon dipped in salt.

To clean and polish patent leather rub well with a cloth dipped in egg white.

Little molasses cakes and coffee make the delightful lunch to serve to afternoon guests on a cool day.

Kerosene rubbed over window screens will remove any rust that may have accumulated during the winter.

Macaroni and rice are best cooked in rapidly boiling water. Cooked in this way they will not stick to the pan.

When lettuce is being prepared for the table it is always advisable to break off the midrib, as that is likely to be better.

When sugaring doughnuts or crullers put them in a bag with the sugar and shake well. This is a saving in sugar and covers the doughnuts or crullers evenly.

Detroit Police Have a Bee Squad

This is the age of specialists, and the Detroit police department is no exception. The "Bee Squad," comprising Patrolmen Louis Oberle and Harold Rowe, is on duty day and night for just such an emergency as arose in a panicky household the other day, when a swarm of bees collected in a garden and threatened to raise bumps on a citizen's countenance. Out went Oberle and Rowe with their trusty weapons, shears, washtub and a piece of cloth to cover the tub. First they located the queen and put her in the tub, then clipped off the twigs on which the bees were clustered and dropped them in with the queen, where they were satisfied to stay as long as "Her Highness" was there. The bees were then presented to a bee-lover. Oberle and Rowe both come from small towns where they kept bees and studied them, and are the only men in the department summoned on such cases.

Organizations, clubs, newspapers and individuals in seven hundred communities in Illinois have been invited to qualify for the state air-marking award to be given by the Illinois Chamber of Commerce. The plan to give certificates for proper air marking will, in a measure, take the place of the plan of the Daniel Guggenheim fund for the promotion of aeronautics, according to Fred D. Fagg, Jr., chairman of the state chamber's aviation committee, and will do much in calling the attention of Illinois cities to the need of proper air-marking facilities. Communities in the state will be furnished information outlining proper methods of air-marking, location of markers, size of letters and other information.

A county which spends yearly more than it takes in should pay claims out of the appropriate fund until it is exhausted and any deficit would be a legal claim against the county, Attorney General Oscar E. Carlstrom has advised the state's attorney at Metropolis. No funds raised for a specific purpose should be used for any other purpose, Carlstrom said, except at the end of the year if there is a surplus, it would go into the general fund and be available for any county use.

Camel's Food Supply

The hump of a camel has a definite purpose, which consists in conserving fat which may be turned into food and fuel as they are required. The Bactrian camel, which is the two-humped variety, lives in a very severe climate and is sometimes forced to go for days without eating. It is therefore necessary for him to have a reserve supply to fall back upon in such emergency. It will be noticed that whenever a camel is hard worked or poorly fed the hump becomes flaccid and falls.

POULTRY

VENTILATE TO GET COMFORT FOR HENS

Simple Methods of Admitting Fresh Air.

Hens enjoy summer breezes but the cold, raw winds chill poultry as they do persons. Yet the poultryman who tries to make his hens comfortable by closing windows in the poultry house only adds to his and their troubles, for he sooner or later gets a wet pen, says Prof. F. L. Fairbanks of the New York State College of Agriculture.

Ventilation should provide air conditions in the laying house which will be comfortable and healthful. It may not be possible to measure a hen's comfort, but all good poultrymen do know when their flocks are contented, he says. In most poultry houses it is possible, without expert labor, to improve air conditions cheaply.

Most tops of windows or other openings are from one to two feet below the highest point in the ceiling. An opening at the highest point approximately one square foot for each 100 hens seems enough to relieve the moisture conditions. The air intakes should be near the floor, for then the air has the greatest distance to travel before it reaches the opening and more chance to mix with the air in the pen and absorb and remove moisture given off by the birds. The bottom openings should be baffled to prevent drafts.

Systems of this type with the exit at the highest point in the house, and with baffled openings near the floor, have been in use for several years and are giving satisfaction, Professor Fairbanks says.

Pays to Raise Broilers for Special Marketing

Special broiler raising is the latest development in the poultry business. It came mainly as a result of the discovery that chickens can be raised on a quantity basis with special equipment and special feeding. Both battery brooders and continuous hot water brooding systems are employed in raising broilers, as are also the colony brooders.

The broiler raiser is not interested in breeding. He buys his baby chicks from a breeder or a hatcheryman and when the birds have reached one and a quarter pounds or two-pound size, he markets the pullets and cockerels alike. In most cases the broiler raiser has a special market which he has developed. Most of them sell their broilers dressed to a special trade.

There are a few things anybody who contemplates going into the poultry business should always keep in mind, and they can be summed up in the following sentence. Start moderately, work hard, and be sure of a good market.

Poultry House Floor

A cheap and very satisfactory type of poultry house floor can be made by building the poultry house in the usual way with the concrete foundation walls extending up about 12 inches above the ground surface. Then tamp in firmly a layer of clayey soil, then oil this thoroughly with used crank case oil then tamp in another layer of loose soil and again oil thoroughly, and continue this until the floor is at the desired height.

This should then be covered with a thin layer of gravel well tamped in, and in this shape is warm and dry, and has a firm enough crust so that the fowls will not scratch holes in it. Later it can be covered with concrete, the oiled earth insuring warmth and dryness.—Wisconsin Agriculturist.

Poultry Increases

Between 1919 and 1929, average production of eggs on farms in the United States increased 63 per cent, according to a report made by Wallace's Farmer. The north-central states, including Iowa, gained at the rate of 65 per cent. Washington led with a gain of 234 per cent, followed by Utah with 223 per cent and California with 149 per cent. Next in rate of increase were Massachusetts, New Jersey and Delaware.

Poultry Hints

Crippled chicks, malformations and dwarfs have no place under any brooder.

Chicks hatched from hens laying small eggs will not produce eggs that top the market.

Symptoms of bronchitis are coughing, sneezing, and rattling sounds in the throat. This disease runs its course very rapidly, deaths being sudden.

Wheat does not contain as much vitamin A as yellow corn. Therefore, when a larger proportion of wheat is fed poultry, more green feed should be fed to make up the difference. Leafy alfalfa hay is recommended.

Peat moss makes one of the best chicken litters. Many commercial poultrymen use it. It is practically dustless. It absorbs manure and can go directly from the henhouse floor to the compost heap. It is the ideal humus for gardens.

SIX "PLIES"?

You can count six layers of fabric here, but the first two under the tread in this tire (or in any so-called "six-ply" tire built this way) do not run from head to head. Some tire-makers count these as "plies," but they are really "breaker strips," so we call them that.

America Might Profit

by Academy of Humor

Establishment of an American Academy of Humor has been suggested. We fear it would too frequently be drawing comparisons between Mark Twain, Bob Burdette and Bill Nye and our present generation of laugh makers. There was an Age of Poetry. It passed. And has the Age of Humor in America gone over the hill?

This is the age of mechanics and mechanism. The race has its moods, as do individuals. Long ago its minds were possessed of a medieval religiosity; and it exhorted and proselytized in the name of its new-found savior.

Next it flew in pursuit of "liberty" and performed such deeds before high heaven as would make the angels weep. It romanticized with Shakespeare and Dante and made war with Charles XII and Napoleon. It took its pen in hand with Shelley, Keats and Tennyson, and in America with Bryant and Longfellow.

Then it laughed with Artemus Ward and Twain, Nye, Burdette, George Ade, George Fitch and all that school. Now, upon what is it most employing its still substantial intellect? Certainly not on Humor. Let us have the American Academy of Humor and see what it can do for us.—F. H. Collier in the St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

MANY LETTERS addressed to you personally

Think of the advertisements in this paper as so many letters addressed to you, personally. That's what they're intended to be, and, actually, that's what they are. This newspaper is, in effect, a mail-bag which brings you news of events and news of the best merchandise at the fairest prices.

You don't throw away letters unread. You don't read three or four letters carefully and skim through the rest. Treat the "merchandise letters" in this newspaper the same way. Read them all. Read them carefully. One single item will often repay you for the time it has taken to read them all.

Many good housekeepers have formed the habit of reading their newspaper with a pencil and paper, ready to jot down the articles they wish to look at when they start out on their shopping tour. Try this method. It saves time, and saves money, and provides you with the pick of the day's merchandise.

Every advertisement has a message all its own.

NEW LENOX

New Lenox M. E. Church
J. N. Dingle, Pastor
'What of the Sabbath', will be the subject of the sermon at the Methodist church next Sunday at 11:00 a. m.
Young People's Service at 6:30 p. m.

The annual Schmuhl family reunion will be held Sunday, June 26 at the Oak View Picnic Grounds opposite the Schmuhl farm home on the Lincoln highway east of New Lenox.

A dinner, reception and post nuptial shower were given Friday night for Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Pfaff, who were married this spring in Waukegan. The affair was given in the dining room of the Methodist Episcopal church which was converted into a bower of roses, ferns and garden flowers.

Mr. and Mrs. George Hunt, parents of Mrs. Pfaff, and Mr. and Mrs. Albert Pfaff, parents of Mr. Pfaff, were hosts and hostesses. The members of the two families and immediate relatives were seated at tables which formed a triangle. The table was decorated with bowls of bride's roses, sweet peas, ferns and daisies. The honored couple found their places at the center of the triangle base, in front of which stood a miniature bride and bridegroom under a lattice work of climbing roses and ferns.

Other guests were seated at other tables decorated in the same manner. The women of the church served dinner at 6:30 o'clock. Decorations were in the bride's chosen colors of peach and green. After the dinner the couple received many gifts. A trio of college friends of Mr. Pfaff sang groups of love songs during the informal reception which followed. Mrs. Pfaff wore a gown of lace with a shoulder bouquet of sweet peas and roses.

Mr. and Mrs. Pfaff will spend the summer in the Hunt home. Mr. Pfaff will return to the University of Illinois in fall to complete a four year course in civil engineering. Mrs. Pfaff graduated from the Academy of Our Lady in Chicago a year ago. Fred Scheel entertained members of the Utilities Securities office force in Chicago, at a steak fry in the woods near Creekside Farm, Saturday afternoon.

IDEAL CONCRETE CO.

Located at 455 Rowell Ave., Phone 2-0790 in Joliet where they are manufacturers of high grade concrete blocks which are good looking, will stand every test and yet which are reasonable in price. The modern building is constructed with concrete blocks.

After the cutting of the forests in this country and the consequent rise in the price of lumber and the modern idea of not building from frame but with materials that are more lasting a demand for materials brought the invention of concrete blocks.

The history of block making in America antedates the arrival of the white man and those who have viewed the adobe houses of the southwest have seen brick making in its most primitive stages. From this humble development of machinery as well as the proper mixing according to scientific formulas especially adapted for the purpose and molds that produce beautiful products, we see products at this place that are the very best that can be produced.

They represent mass production in industry and are offered at prices that are very reasonable. While these modern products are manufactured here, the distribution of them is by no means confined to this city, for they have received orders from many parts of the state. The general excellence of the products has won for them a reputation that is rapidly and widely spreading with the result that the modern plant is quite busy with the manufacture of these superior products.

The factory is equipped with all the latest and best machinery for the manufacture of concrete products of superior quality. They only use the best of materials and as a consequence their products are of uniform good quality.

In making this review of this section we wish to direct your attention to the Ideal Concrete Company as one of our most valued interests and one which is responsible for much of our healthful and fireproof buildings.

STORM OUTWITTED BY REROUTING WIRE CIRCUITS

Detour via Telephone Lines to Coast Maintains Service to Mid West in Emergency

Motorists who talk of detours should avoid telephone traffic engineers, else they will find themselves bested in conversation with men who improvise at a moment's notice detours thousands of miles long. Furthermore, the traffic over the detours these engineers arrange gets there just as quickly as though it had taken the direct route.

Winter Storms Take Their Toll

Early winter sleet storms in North Dakota broke telephone and telegraph pole lines and set the communications companies to providing temporary service and high speed repairs. When the Bell System line which carries the stream of Associated Press news from St. Paul, Minn., to the teletypewriters of various North Dakota daily newspapers went down, telephone traffic engineers quickly employed other circuit routings to circumvent the storm area. This first storm detour was comprised of a circuit from St. Paul via Denver, Colo., Helena, Montana, and into North Dakota from the west.

A Thousand-Mile Detour

Then another sleet storm in Colorado impaired that circuit temporarily and a real detour into North Dakota was promptly set up. This detour circuit went more than a thousand miles out of the way to deliver the news from St. Paul via Chicago, Amarillo, Tex., San Francisco, Seattle, and back east into North Dakota. The round-about pathway gave the storm a wide enough berth and the service to the newspapers was not interrupted for more than a total of two hours throughout the series of storms.

The practice of supplying detours to furnish emergency service when the more direct facilities are impaired by storm or fire is the first step taken by the telephone company. If pathways are available, they are employed, no matter how lengthy and complicated a hook-up may be required. This common method of thwarting nature's occasional attempt to isolate telephones and telephone typewriters is known simply as rerouting.

MAKE PLAIN CAKE RICH WITH CHOCOLATE FLAVOR

EVERY housewife has a prized cake recipe for special occasions. But cakes baked every Saturday for daily family needs must be economical as well as tempting.

How fortunate therefore that chocolate flavor is a family favorite. Chocolate works wonders either with a simple family cake or one for special occasions. A chocolate frosting makes the plainest cake tempting, while a chocolate batter makes your simplest cake rich.

One-Egg Chocolate Layer Cake
2 cups sifted cake 4 tablespoons butter or other
2 teaspoons baking shortening powder 1 egg, unbeaten
¼ teaspoon salt ¼ cup milk
1 cup sugar ½ teaspoon vanilla
Sift flour once, measure, add baking powder and salt, sift together three times. Cream butter thoroughly, add sugar gradually. Cream together until light and fluffy. Add egg, beat thoroughly. Add flour, alternately with milk, a small amount at a time. Beat after each addition until smooth. Add flavoring. Bake in two greased 9-inch layer pans in moderate oven (375° F.) 25 minutes, or in greased loaf pan, 8x8x2 inches, in moderate oven (350° F.) 50 minutes. Double recipe for three 10-inch layers. Spread with Soft Chocolate Frosting.

Soft Chocolate Frosting
4 squares unsweet 4 tablespoons flour ened chocolate, 1 cup sugar cut in pieces 2 tablespoons butter
1½ cups milk
1 teaspoon vanilla

Add chocolate to milk in double boiler and heat. When chocolate is melted, beat with rotary egg beater until blended. Sift flour with sugar; add a small amount of chocolate mixture, stirring until smooth. Return to double boiler, cook until thickened. Add butter and vanilla. Cool. Spread on cake. This frosting covers tops and sides of two 9-inch layers.

Chocolate Cup Cakes
(2 eggs)
1½ cups sifted 1 cup sugar cake flour 2 eggs, well beaten

Triangle Talkies

Hi there!
Did every body have a good time Monday evening? I'll say they did.
Wonder who ate the most "hot dogs"? Did you hear "Windy" barking the next day? Meby he'll have to spend two bucks for a dog license.

There seems to be a new way among the young fellows in town, namely, that they seem to get a thrill out of kissing their girl friend's nose how much for a lesson "Wally".

I wonder where "Bernie got the basketball she was carrying around Monday night, I'll bet it is from "Red".

We wonder if Al Krueger really is the original "great big man from the South", as it is rare indeed when he has no cigar in his mouth. He always smokes a "Dutch Master", as he thinks it makes him more popular with the fairer sex. Is this the secret of your success Al? Meby you could tell us Pal.

Upon investigation by the committee it was found that several girls had a mishap. They were politely informed that hereafter they are to wear low heeled shoes to any outdoor festivity the club decides to present, as several complaints came to the committee from their escorts. (Perhaps the escorts complained just to make it look as if they didn't want to be chivalrous when they truly do like to play Sir Walter Raleigh)

Bernetta are you still dashing around with that "dread big" boy friend? We didn't see him at the party, so were just wondering that's all.

Be seen' you all next week.

Problem of Mysterious Bell-Ringing Solved by Telephone Man

Oftentimes imaginary troubles are more bothersome than are the real ones—as this story goes to prove.

Not long ago Repairman McClintic of the Southwestern Bell Telephone Company, who is stationed in Hannibal, Mo., was called to solve a real mystery story. A complaint had been made that a telephone bell was ringing every fifteen minutes in the home of a subscriber, but that no one was on the line at such times. McClintic tested and re-tested the line, but found everything O. K. However, the bell continued to ring every fifteen minutes. Finally, the repairman found a clue to the mystery. The subscriber had recently purchased a clock that rang the quarter hours, and the clock bell was identical in tone with the telephone bell. McClintic changed the telephone bell, and now all is well once again.

Facts About the Telephone

For the year ending December 31, 1931, the Bell System paid operating taxes of more than $90,000,000.

In each of the past 31 years, stockholders of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company have increased in number.

Work on the New York to Atlanta telephone cable has progressed as far as the Seneca river in Anderson County, South Carolina.

All the planes of the United Air Lines flying between Los Angeles and New York now have radio telephone communication with ground stations.

FIRST TELEPHONE BILL PAID FIFTY-FIVE YEARS AGO

Fifty-five years ago the first telephone bill was paid. The first man in the world to pay for a telephone was James Emery, Jr., a wholesale fish dealer who lived in Charlestown, Mass. It was in May of 1877 that Mr. Emery had a telephone put at each end of a line connecting his house with his brother's home across the street. On May 30 of the same year, he paid the sum of $20, which was the first money ever paid for a telephone. On June 8 of the same year, he returned and paid $10 additional, and took away three more telephones which he placed in nearby houses. All five of these telephones were connected on extensions of the original private line. When he made this additional payment, Mr. Emery also signed the first telephone lease.

COLD . . AGAIN!

How often does it happen to you?

Feeling good . . . all ready to wash up and shave . . .
and then only a cold stream from the hot water faucet.

It's a sure way to start the day wrong.

But here's a tip. You can start these days right by having an automatic gas water heater installed in your home. Then you'll have plenty of hot water for washing and shaving. Plenty for bathing and everything else, too. Every day . . . all day . . . without waiting.

Better think it over. This luxury of having all the hot water you want the minute you want it costs comparatively little — far less, probably, than you are now spending for many incidentals that bring nothing like the comfort and convenience automatic hot water service brings.

See your LOCAL PLUMBER or your PUBLIC SERVICE COMPANY STORE for all the facts.

SYNOPSIS

Exhausted, ragged, and starving, a boy of about sixteen is found in the woods by a camping party. He has fled from his brutal father, Bat Morryson, Fed, and in clean clothes, the boy, who gives his name as Shad (Sheridan) is sent on his way to Canton with a letter to Colonel Blake. The colonel, his wife, and their young daughter Ruth, are impressed by the boy's manner. He secures a situation in the village of Amity Dam, and becomes friendly with a youth of his age, "Bony," and Bumpy Brown, tinker, considered by the straitlaced as a drunkard because of his periodic lapses from strict sobriety. Bat Morryson comes to Amity Dam, determined to take his son back to his own disreputable life. He is overruled by Colonel Blake, who is the district attorney, and his father passes out of Shad's life. With Bony, he pays a visit to Bumpy Brown.

One day Mr. Smithers sent Shad down to Cyrus Doolittle's with a package of medicine which had come up on the stage for old Oscar Perry, the father-in-law of Cyrus. Here was the ill-fated house which Shad was never to forget. The old gentleman was sitting in a wheel-chair. He had the worried, sorrowful look of the strong man who has had his warning. He had been partly paralyzed by a stroke. His daughter, Mrs. Doolittle, opened the door for Shad. She was an erect handsome woman with a face somewhat careworn but still comely.

The house had a gloomy and depressing atmosphere. There was a solemn note in the ticking of the old family clock. After all, houses have a kind of character. Cyrus Doolittle and his son Moses, a boy of Shad's age, were cleaning a pair of colts tethered on the barn floor. His errand accomplished, Shad went out for a look at the colts. The boy turned from his work to speak to Shad. His father rebuked him, saying:

"Come, boy, I'm in a hurry to get away. Bring the harness."

Turning to the young clerk, he asked: "Young man, are you loafing today?"

"No, sir."

"Well, you don't seem to be very busy."

The tall, brown-bearded, gray-eyed man had spoken in his hustling manner without stopping his work.

Late in the afternoon of the memorable tenth of November Shad had gone down the road some two miles to collect a bill. Darkness overtook him on his way back. He was hungry and hurrying with a bicycle lantern in his hand, so as not to be too late for his supper. When about a quarter of a mile from the store he dimly saw a man approaching him at a rapid pace. He could hear his footsteps on the rough frozen road. Shad stopped. The man had turned suddenly, some sixty paces from where Shad was standing, got over the fence and hurried away in the darkness. As Shad came near the store he saw a crowd of people in the street. Men were shouting. Hysterical women were crying. Shad ran toward the crowd in front of the store. Bony was there.

"What's the matter?" Shad asked.

"What's the matter! Why, some man just bust into Cy Doolittle's house—not ten minutes ago—'em shot up the hull family, murdered 'em right an' left. The ol' man is killed. Mis' Doolittle an' the teacher is over to Silas Meriwether's mos' dead an' bleedin' awful. It was like a battle in the war."

A singular paralysis of fear and distress had fallen upon the good people of that village. A few men had rushed out in the roads and fields in a vain quest for the criminal.

"Come on! I saw him," Shad said to Bony, and the two ran at top speed down the road toward the fence where Shad had seen the man climb over the fence and vanish in the darkness. It was near the Doty place. The man must have gone around the barns and then whither, it was impossible to say. The boys were in deadly fear of finding the criminal but saw nobody.

"We're darn' fools," said Bony as they were wearily walking back.

"What would we have done with him an' what would he have done to us? They say ol' Bumpy Brown is the murderer."

"Lord, no!" Shad exclaimed. "It can't be."

"Less he's gone crazy. Two men have run down the river to see if he's to home."

So began the wildest night in the history of Amity Dam.

Divested of all the excitement and wild rumor of that night, this is the problem—one of the most remarkable in the criminal records of our country.

Mrs. Doolittle, her invalid father, her son Moses, a boy of twelve, and Henry Pierson, a handsome well-dressed young man of nineteen from Ashfield who was teaching in the school at Amity Dam, were sitting around the evening lamp, about seven o'clock, the work of the day being finished. Cyrus Doolittle had gone to Griggsby, some fifteen miles away. Suddenly this family group heard a rap at the front door. The boy Moses ran and opened it. A man, masked in a peculiar way, stood before him. He wore a small, light-colored slouch hat, tan overalls and a coat of the same material. His face was covered with a red and white handkerchief. The man advanced into the room holding a revolver in his right hand. The boy fled before him through a door at the back of the house. The intruder walked with the limp of Bumpy Brown. Henry Pierson bravely took a step toward him. The first bullet was fired at the young man, breaking his left arm at the elbow. Shocked and frightened, the latter partly fell on a lounge, then ran out of the open door calling for help.

The masked man fired at Mrs. Doolittle, who had risen from her chair. The ball struck her breast above her heart and glanced, penetrating the flesh of her shoulder. She did not fall. She stood appalled. The man approached her. Then came a curious factor in the problem. He stood for a second, close to her, the revolver pointed at her face. He did not fire. This gave color to the theory that she was not the one that he had come to kill. He dealt her something between a blow and a vigorous push with his left hand. It appeared that he was trying to get her out of the scene.

She fell, quickly recovered her feet and ran through the open door from which her son and young Pierson had fled into the darkness beyond. As she fell old Oscar Perry, her invalid father, threw himself forward from his chair and seized the skirts of the intruder's coat and clung to them with his strong hands. The masked man clubbed him with his revolver but still he clung. Two shots with the muzzle of the weapon close to the invalid's neck loosened his hold. The old man slumped to the floor.

The murderer ran out into the darkness and away, firing a shot as he went. All this had been accomplished in less than a minute. Mrs. Doolittle, her son and the teacher had fled to a neighbor's house, and help had been sent to Oscar Perry.

News of the crime sped through the village like a wind-driven fire in dead grass. Within five minutes the wires were flashing it through the county. Doctors, the district attorney, the sheriff, the county judge were presently speeding toward the little village of Amity Dam.

The lights were burning most of the night in Ephraim Smithers' store. For a time it was filled with excited residents. Most of them agreed that Bumpy Brown was the guilty man. With these Shad and Bony openly took issue.

"He wouldn't have done it even if he was drunk," they said. "He's the most harmless critter in the world when he's drunk."

"What was he always knockin' the Doolittles for?" the doubters asked.

The boys had to acknowledge that they did not know, that it was probably some crazy notion he had got in his head.

About nine o'clock a man entered the store with important news. Cy Doolittle had just got home with lathered horses. He had arrived at Ashfield and heard of the crime about eight-thirty and driven like mad to his house. He was over to Meriwether's where his wife lay dying. He had said that Bumpy Brown was the only man he knew who had a grudge against him. He had put Brown off his place one day and the old man had sworn that he would get even.

Moreover, the newcomer announced that the doctors had come and were then working over Mrs. Doolittle, young Pierson and the old man Perry, who was nearly dead. The sheriff, the district attorney and the county judge were at the Doolittle house looking over the ground.

Soon these ministers of justice came to the store. Colonel Blake gave Shad a hearty greeting. The colonel was calm and dignified. He said to the boy:

"My wife and I have done a lot of talking about you. We have enjoyed your letters."

Shad told of the man who approached him in the road and took to the fields when he saw the boy and his bicycle lantern.

"That is curious," said the colonel. "We may hear more about him. First, we'll have some crackers and cheese and ginger ale."

While the officials were eating, the two men who had gone down the river arrived with old Bumpy Brown. A silence fell as they entered. The tinker, who preceded the men, looked pale and serious. A voice from a huddled group near the door, clearly audible to all in the room, said:

"He's a d—n' murderer!"

Colonel Blake turned quickly and said: "Look here, my friends, it is for me to say who is the murderer, not you. I request you all to go to your homes and beware of hasty judgments. In the excitement of this hour it is easy to be wrong."

He turned to Mr. Smithers and said: "If you will ask these good people to go home, and lock your door, I shall perhaps be able to arrive at some conclusion of my own."

The villagers slowly filed out of the store. The door was locked. Bumpy Brown, the two men who had found him, the officials, Mr. Smithers and Shad were now present. Colonel Blake turned to the tinker, asking:

"Is this Mr. Brown?"

"Yes, sir."

"I am the district attorney of this county, and here is Sheriff Colewell and this is Judge Swift. You know, I presume, that a crime was committed about seven o'clock this evening at the home of Cyrus Doolittle."

"These men has told me," Bumpy answered.

"You perhaps do not know that Mr. Doolittle and others suspect you of being the criminal."

"They didn't tell me what Cy Doolittle said, but they told me what other folks was sayin'. They said the murderer had a limp like mine. Well, mister, I can't help it if he did, I ain't hurt nobody. When I come in here every one had a knife in his eye fer ol' Bumpy Brown. I'm all 'lone in the world. I ain't got no friends, but I tell ye I ain't hurt nobody since I was a so'ger an' it was my business to hurt folks."

There was a touch of pathos in the voice of the man as he spoke these words.

Shad was tempted to say, "I am your friend," but he held his peace in the presence of these great men.

The district attorney directed Sheriff Colewell to search the man for weapons. This was done. Only a key and a jackknife were found in his clothing.

Colonel Blake took out his pencil and writing pad as he said: "Mr. Brown, I am going to ask you some questions and take down what you say in reply. First it is my duty to inform you that it is your privilege to refuse to answer any question I may ask. My advice is that you ought not to answer any question which would tend to prove your guilt. Where were you at seven o'clock this evening?"

"Out on the river fishin' fer bull pout."

"Was anyone with you?"

"No."

"Did anyone see you fishing?"

"Guess not. 'Twas mos' dark when I started."

"Did no boat pass you?"

"None."

"Did you get any fish?"

"No."

"What did you do today?"

The old man told of going to Pierson to fix a leaky roof. He had returned to his shack about five; had lain down for a nap, and gone out to fish an hour or so later.

"Do you own a revolver?"

"No. I have never owned a revolver."

"What was your opinion of Cyrus Doolittle?"

"I have never liked him."

"Why?"

"Why does a man hate skunks?"

"Was there bad blood between you? Did you have any quarrel with him?"

"Oh, he shoved me off his place one day."

"Did you threaten him?"

"I wouldn't wonder. I dunno what I said. Nobody does when he's as mad as a hornet."

"Why did he shove you off his place?"

Milk Records in Wales Kept by Measurement

The measuring and recording of the amount of milk given by cows has a much lengthier history than many people might suppose, according to an article in the Farm and Stock Breeder.

"Milk recording is not a new-fangled idea in Wales. It was carried on in the principality before the Tenth century. The farmers of Wales used to migrate to the hills in summer time. They used to put the milk of their cows in a common churn, and they had to keep a record of it in order to divide the produce of butter and cheese satisfactorily. The cows were turned into untouched pasture and their milk yields measured—not weighed as is the practice today—and the produce of butter and cheese was handed over according to what each cow had yielded on any particular day.

"The record was in accordance with what was known as the venedotian measure, a vessel which was three thumbs across the bottom, six thumbs across the middle, nine thumbs across the top, and nine thumbs diagonally. A thumb was about an inch, so that the venedotian measure held about a gallon of milk and a normal cow was expected to give about two gallons a day. Three-times-a-day milking was also well known in Wales in the Twelfth century, and the month of May was known as 'The month of three milkings a day.'"

Silence is a powerful argument.

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

Lesson for June 26

REVIEW: WHAT WE HAVE LEARNED FROM GENESIS.

GOLDEN TEXT—And we know that all things work together for good to them that love God, to them who are the called according to his purpose.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Some Friends We Have Made.

JUNIOR TOPIC—What We Have Learned in Genesis.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Favorite Characters in Genesis.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—What Genesis Teaches About God and Human Relationships.

Genesis, the book from which the lessons of the quarter are taken, as its name indicates, is a book of beginnings. It contains the only reliable information we have of the origin of the heavens and the earth, plant and animal life, human life, institutions, and relations.

Lesson for April 3.

God was before all things. Everything but God had a beginning. The things which are came to be by the creative act of a personal God. Man himself came into being by the creative act of God.

Lesson for April 10.

An explanation of the ills and sorrows of the world can be made only on the basis of the historic fall of man as recorded in the Bible. Man is not what he was when he came from the Creator's hand. The prime actor in this tragedy was the personal, cunning, and malicious being called "the Devil." Because man is a free being, possessing the power of choice, sin entered through the act of man's will in believing the Devil instead of God.

Lesson for April 17.

Following man's fall, God gave the promise of a redeemer. God chose Abraham to be the head of the new race through which this gracious promise was to be realized. The failure of this new race to carry out God's plan is the explanation of the disordered world.

Lesson for April 24.

Lot's prosperity was due to his relationship to his uncle, Abram. In spite of this fact, he selfishly grasped for the best. Abram, to avert possible strife between Lot and himself, according to Lot the choice of the best of the land. Though Lot's choice involved him in trouble, Abram graciously went to his rescue, delivering him from his oppressor, thus being a fine example of the art of living in peace.

Lesson for May 1.

Isaac was a child of the covenant, gentle and peace-loving. Though a lover of peace, he had enemies. His very prosperity incited the envy of the Philistines. His peaceable withdrawal from them gave him increased influence.

Lesson for May 8.

Esau sold his birthright for a bowl of pottage. The birthright was the right of being at the head of the patriarchal family. In a time of physical exhaustion he relinquished his claim to the future in order to gratify a present desire.

Lesson for May 15.

Jacob's scheming involved him in trouble. On his flight from an outraged brother he was overtaken by night and obliged to sleep in a field with a stone for his pillow. It was under such circumstances that God gave him the vision at Bethel.

Lesson for May 22.

On Jacob's return to Canaan to meet Esau, the Angel of the Lord wrestled with him at the ford of Jabbok. Jacob's self-will needed to be broken before he could enter Canaan. He was humbled by the dislocation of his thigh. When thus humbled, he quit wrestling and clung to God. Jacob did not get the blessing through wrestling, but because of his clinging to God. It was easy for Jacob to be reconciled to his brother because he was now right with God.

Lesson for May 29.

Joseph was hated by his brethren. The father's favoritism fanned this hatred into a flame, and resulted in his being sold into slavery.

Lesson for June 5.

Joseph's success was not primarily due to the fact that he was a good worker, but to the fact that the good hand of his God was upon him. Joseph was not a self-made, but a God-made man.

Lesson for June 12.

Though Joseph severely tested his brethren, he graciously forgave them and nourished them through the years of famine. He knew that God had sent him to be their deliverer.

Lesson for June 19.

In old age after many years of sorrow for the loss of Joseph, Jacob goes to Egypt and is there nourished through the famine by Joseph. After Jacob's death, Joseph continues his gracious attitude to his brethren.

Three Kinds of People

There are three kinds of people in the world, the wills, the won'ts and the can'ts. The first accomplish everything; the second oppose everything; the third fail in everything.—Selected.

He Is the Loser

It has been said that certain insects which sting, lose their lives when they sting. A man who uses his tongue to express the venom of his hate loses that which to him is better than life.

Fertilizers Do Much to Improve Pasture

Records Have Proved Value of Treatments.

What will fertilizers do for pastures? Twenty-six farmers in southeastern Ohio answered the question by making fertilizer trials. Each laid out seven plots and under the direction of D. R. Dodd, soils and crops specialist for Ohio State university, gave varying treatments to the different plots and kept records of the pasturage yield.

The most profitable treatment was 50 pounds of nitrogen, 120 pounds of phosphoric acid and 80 pounds of potash an acre. Plots which received this application yielded 4,116 pounds of grass an acre compared with 1,473 pounds where no fertilizer was applied. The treatment cost $10.63 an acre which left $32.58 profit. Grass from the untreated plots was valued at $14.03 an acre. An increase of 2,447 pounds of grass was credited to an application of 50 pounds of nitrogen and 120 pounds of phosphoric acid an acre. The cost was $9.03 and the value above cost was $31.53.

Other treatments and the returns above costs were: 120 pounds of phosphoric acid an acre, $16.57; 120 pounds phosphoric acid and 80 pounds potash, $19.23; 50 pounds nitrogen, $23.82; 25 pounds nitrogen, 120 pounds phosphoric acid and 80 pounds potash, $23.24; 50 pounds nitrogen, 30 pounds phosphoric acid and 20 pounds potash, $29.52.—Capper's Farmer.

Cheap Crop Protection in Treatment of Seed

Treating seed is a common practice on modern farms. Farmers have accustomed themselves to protecting potatoes, oats, barley, and wheat from attacks of bacterial and fungus diseases. Experiment stations are finding that corn also suffers from fungus diseases through which losses of varying extent result. These stations have also discovered that proper treatment will save these losses. Such treatment has added substantially to the yields of the resulting crops while the cost is not more than five cents per acre.

The Illinois experiment station makes this statement: "Some very striking increases in stand, vigor and yield of corn have been obtained from seed treatment. Even with the very best seed obtainable, seed treatment, in Illinois experiments, has usually proved worth while. Treated seed can be planted earlier with greater safety than untreated seed, for there is less danger of damage because of unfavorable weather conditions, in case it should lie on the ground a long time before sprouting. Seed treatment may also be of special benefit in case the soil is wet when the corn is in the seeding stage."

Terracing Costs

Cost of terracing cultivated land varies from $3 to $4 an acre to as high as $12 to $15, depending largely upon character of soil, slope of land, and amount of erosion that already has taken place, says the bureau of agricultural engineering, United States Department of Agriculture. It is more expensive to terrace a field that is badly cut up with gullies than one which has a comparatively smooth slope. Gullies have to be crossed by terraces, and much extra work is necessary to strengthen terraces at such points. The bureau believes that $4 to $8 an acre is a conservative estimate of the average cost of terracing.

Potatoes and Potash

Potash is needed in large amounts by potatoes, according to fertilizer experiments being conducted at the Ohio experiment station. Since farm manure is high in potash, averaging about ten pounds per ton, eight tons or more per acre will maintain the potash supply. In recent years, large acreages of potatoes are being grown without manure, cover crops being plowed down to give the proper physical condition. With this system, at least 80 pounds of potash are required in the fertilizer to insure a yield of 300 bushels per acre.—Wallace's Farmer.

Agricultural Hints

Poultry experts estimate that a hen producing 100 eggs per year has paid her way for feed and labor and that all eggs above this number represent clear gain.

Twigs, dead flower stalks and garden debris should be burned rather than placed in the compost pile. They afford a splendid harbor for insect pests if allowed to remain on the premises.

Three crops per season are all that an alfalfa stand should be expected to produce. In a number of tests it has been demonstrated that four crops have greatly reduced the stand during the first season.

Feeding cattle dry hay just before turning them on rich, legume pasture reduces danger of bloat.

Peonies and iris like plenty of water as they are coming into bloom. Remember the big overhead they are producing and give them water accordingly.

Plant potatoes at least 3 or 4 inches below the level surface of the field. The tubers set deeper are less subject to blight, rot, sunburn, second growth, and other tuber defects.

Mercolized Wax Keeps Skin Young

Get an ounce and use as directed. Fine particles of wax skin peel off until all defects such as pimples, freckles, tan and freckles disappear. Skin is then soft and velvety. Your face looks years younger. Mercolized Wax brings out the hidden beauty of your skin. To remove wrinkles use one ounce Powdered Sandal dissolved in one-half pint witch hazel. At drug stores.

Robin Had Business There

Some time during the winter a pane of glass was broken in the clubhouse of the Bath (Maine) Country club and an early arrival from the south decided that was a good place to build a nest and rear her young. As the clubhouse had not been kept open during the winter no one knew about the feathered visitor and recently the glass was reset. Then it was noticed that a robin kept flying against the glass and pecking at it. Inside the clubhouse was found a nest with two blue eggs in it.
